The Australian women's national football team are known as the 'Matildas'.

But they could have been the Lorikeets!

The nickname Matildas, which comes from a famous Australian folk song called 'Waltzing Matilda', was the winning name in a viewer competition which also included the Lorikeets and the Blue Flyers!

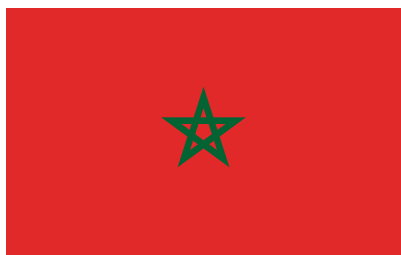

The Matilda's team colours are green and gold with their uniform including aqua and blue for their away games.

Since 1995, the Matildas have never failed to qualify for the World Cup!

This year will be extra special as they prepare to play in the first FIFA Women's World Cup™ hosted in the Southern Hemisphere and the first one to be hosted here in Australia with a home crowd cheering them on!

Did you know that Morocco will be training here in Wyndham during the FIFA Women's World Cup?™

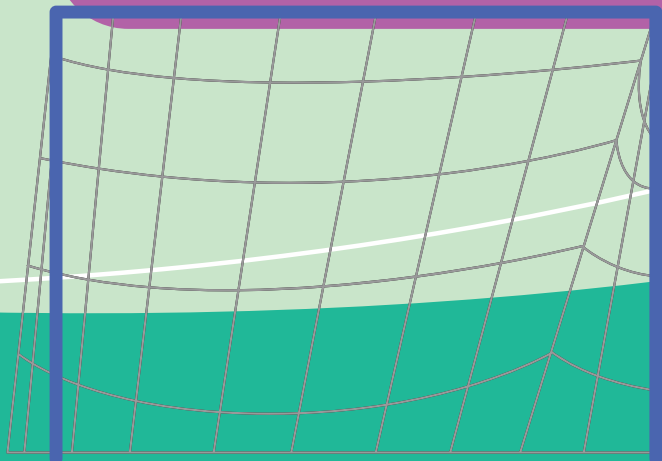

Morocco's national women's football team are known as the 'Atlas Lionesses'.

The Atlas Lion, also known as the Barbary Lion, was once found in North Africa including Morocco but is now sadly extinct in the wild.

The Moroccan team colours are red and green.

This is a very exciting time for Morocco as it's their first time qualifying and playing at the FIFA Women's World Cup!™

In 2022, the team reached another milestone when they made the final of the Women's Africa Cup of Nations for the first time.

World Cup Teams

There are 32 teams competing in the FIFA Women's World Cup™ this year.
